

I pay monthly for the privilege of having a telephone and feel that my privacy is severely invaded by the ridiculous telemarketing efforts. When telemarketers start paying my $50 a month phone bill, it will be then that they should be entitled to call for sales opportunities. Until then, they are infringing on my personal time. I would NEVER purchase anything sold by a telemarketing effort, simply for the reason that they called me. Obviously, this defeats the purpose. I am certain there are others out there who stand on this principal.
